J. WEST GOODWIN,
 SEDALIA, MO.

The total loss by the terrible storm at Sabine Pass, Tex., has not, nor will it ever be computed. So far however, the loss of life as reported foots up to one hundred and twenty. It is getting to be rather a dangerous thing to live in one of the coast cities.

Sam Jones is said to be tackling the sinners of Canada. He will have a tough job by the time he gets around to sundry wealthy Americans who are sojourning there in the interests of self protection against the hard and heartless laws which, under other circumstances, might be enforced in this country.

Bob Ingersoll is not in favor of after dinner speeches, and says he never heard one that he was not "sorry he was present." Robert should forgive the after dinner speech makers, in view of the fact that they are only an occasional absurdity, while he is on hand in season and out of season.

Wiggins, after all, seems to have been merely a day before the fair in his weather predictions, and the storms which he saw in his mind's eye, came along, yard wide and of the regulation ferocity. After all, the man seems to have a clear idea of what the elements promised, and the opinion of a hurried world, was rather hard on the Canadian.

Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague is now forty-six years of age, and is said to be still very beautiful. There are people who can live through anything and still retain their beauty, and it is possible that Mrs. Sprague is one of them, but if so, she is not the grief-stricken woman which the public has been led to believe she has been for a series of years.

The BAZOO trusts that in view of Col. Jaynes' prominence, and his well known friendliness to the city of his adoption, during his lifetime, that Sedalians, almost to an individual, will be present at the last sad rites which it is the prerogative of civilized humanity to engage in as a tribute to that which was "once life, full, perfect, but now alas, no more."

When the Knights of Labor decided to hold their great annual convention in the city of Richmond they could not have foreseen that a very important question of civil rights would be presented to them there for consideration. There are colored delegates, and not one of the hotels or boarding houses controlled by white men will take them in. But will white delegates consent to live in hotels from which colored delegates are excluded? All members, without regard to race or creed, or equals in the organization. "The injury of one is the concern of all."

One of the most horrible experiences of the terrible storm at Sabine Pass was that of Capt. Hyatt and Wm. Guy, members of the relief committee, on their way to the Pass. While the train in which they were traveling was crossing a dump five miles from the Pass, it was stopped by the water, and it was found that the place was literally alive with snakes, many of them the deadly moccasin. Every step across the dump, that Messrs. Hyatt and Guy took, was through these squirming, twisting snakes, while wild cats frenzied by the rushing waters, snapped at the unlucky pedestrians in such a manner as to make their blood run cold. It was indeed a terrible experience, and it is safe to say that the gentlemen in question will not soon care to visit a menagerie as a means of recreation and pleasure.

Barry blows as to what he will do to injure the business of Armour, who is, he says, to blame for the stand made by the packing house firms at Chicago. This is the usual method of reasoning done by the order to which Barry belongs. There are thousands of men employed by Armour, and he can do without them much better than they can do without him. He can afford to close up his houses entirely, and the men cannot afford to be idle; he would have enough to live on in peace and plenty, did he shut down his business entirely, but the men to whom he has given employment, would, with their helpless wives and children, suffer. It is not Armour, then, who would suffer, but the poor, and the Knights of Labor, led by Barry, would be merely attacking the best interest of their fellows, did they institute a senseless boycott against him.

A Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia News says: "Mrs. Cadman of Buffalo, accompanied Mrs. Cleveland back to Washington. Every afternoon, the ladies have taken a drive out to the president's new country place. On these drives, Mrs. Cleveland has had for company, besides Mrs. Cadman, the black poodle and the president." It will be seen that the poodle is mentioned before the president, and there is no telling how soon, as an accessory of the fair bride, the president will be entirely ignored. We protest against this. The president may be old and a little inclined to leisure when it comes to "turning the rascals out," but when he is given a back seat in preference to the poodle, it is time for the entire country to rise in rebellion, and demand that the poodle shall go. Mrs. Cleveland may think more of her poodle than she does of the president, but the country won't have it that way.

It would perhaps be one of the best things that could happen to the country at large did Barry and his band succeed in boycotting the Armour packing houses, as he has threatened to do. The act in itself would prove to the working interests that their comfort is not of the least consideration, when it comes to the test, on the part of the noble order, for when thousands of men are thrown out of employment they are injured irretrievably and the employer is only briefly crippled. The act too, would prove that despite of Mr. Powderly's denials of the boycott as a weapon for revenge it is an all important factor and its enforcement as a result of Mr. Barry's plan would do more to make it unpopular than anything that could be suggested. Upon the whole, as was said above, it would be just as well, so far as an understanding and enlightenment of the people is concerned if the boycott should be at once instituted.

The Kansas City Star speaking of the proposed boycott against Armour, for the stand he has taken in the Chicago strike, says with much truth: "If the Knights of Labor association is to be useful to the workmen of this country it must be through wise counsel and the restraints which organization is able to exercise. The laboring men have had a right to quit work when the terms of their employment do not suit them. But they have no right to prevent others from working on the terms which they reject. They have no right to conspire to ruin the business of any man with whom they cannot agree as to terms. They cannot in justice to themselves or their fellow workmen take measures to contract the opportunities of employment or increase the cost of living in order to carry out a scheme of retaliation. There is reason to believe that Mr. Powderly thoroughly understands the legal and economic bearings of the boycott: and, for the interests of the workmen much more than any other class, it is to be hoped that he will succeed in repressing it as a weapon of revenge."

The Fall of Neeld.

The robbery of the Chicago banks by Neeld, the pork packer, on worthless warehouse receipts and the embezzlement of the property held as collateral would never have occurred had there been a law extraditing criminals of that class who skip to Canada to avoid the penalty of their offenses. Unquestionably Neeld argued that if he were successful in his operations he would amass a large sum of money for future speculations. If he were not successful a few hours would place him out of the law's reach, and in his harbor of refuge he could remain altogether or at some time in the future compromise with his creditors and return. It was really a chance of living luxuriously in Chicago or luxuriously in Canada. Had there been an international agreement between the United States and Great Britain to send back embezzlers and thieves this defalcation never would have occurred. Mr. Neeld would even now have been on the road which leads to Joliet. Had the penitentiary stared Neeld in the face the banks would not have lost their money, for it is not conceivable that a man of his prominence would deliberately choose to go to the penitentiary.

RAILWAY RACKET.

A Budget of Local Information for the Especial Benefit of Railway Men.

—Vincent Hurin was the only admission to the hospital yesterday.
 —Charles Nicewarner was discharged from the hospital yesterday, convalescent.
 —The Missouri Pacific boys received their ducats yesterday and were correspondingly happy.
 —The next annual meeting of the Road Masters' association will be held at Cleveland next October.
 —The first annual convention of the railway trackman of America, will be held at Council Bend, Iowa, on November 25th and 26th.
 —In the Wabash railroad telegraph system there are 27,000 miles of wire, and to operate the lines' batteries having an aggregate of 7,050 cells are required.
 —The demands on the Missouri Pacific shops at Parsons are enormous and taxes the capacity of the shops to their fullest extent. Nearly all of the men make from two to three days extra time each week.
 —The proposition of the Parsons & Pacific to give a lot in their new town of Lake to the first person who would erect a business building there has been accepted and a good, substantial house is being erected for a general store.

—W. F. Beal, conductor on the middle division of the Pacific, has been granted a leave of absence for one week and left last night for a visit to friends on the line of the Iron Mountain road. It is to be hoped that he will have a pleasant trip and safe return.
 —The Missouri Central railway will take in old Hannibal and Kansas City. The Courier is authority for the following: "Colonel J. T. Barber said yesterday that all the contracts for the building of the line from Kansas City to Alton, and the road from Hannibal to the junction in Boone county, had been let and the papers signed, and work would be begun at once."

Wants to Atone.

The following is a communication of a recent date from Parsons, Kansas. It is anonymous and perhaps it is not a means of doing some good as it can certainly do no harm, it is given for what it is worth:
 EDITOR BAZOO:—I have been guilty of a mean trick and I feel like making atonement for it and righting it if possible. Some time ago I was persuaded to go to a certain respectable lady's house in this city and represent myself as Mr. — and ask the lady to show me some letters she had in her possession that my wife, Mrs. — had written to her husband. She did not hesitate to give them to me, her husband being present told me I should not read them; there assuming to be very uncomfortable. I never shall forget the troubled expression on that lady's face; it haunts me awake or asleep until I feel I must make some amendment or it will surely kill me. Now I can be of any service to that lady I am ready to do anything. Hoping that she will see this and not hesitate to speak to me as she did the other day on the street. You will hear from me again. O. K.

New Venture.

The Central Missouri Sentinel made its appearance yesterday. It is an eight page, six column weekly paper. It is republican in politics, brimful of news and typographically the peer of any paper in Central Missouri. E. D. Crawford, a journalist of experience and ability, is at the helm as editor and proprietor. Its aims and objects are best told in its salutatory.

"Believing that the republicans of Sedalia and Pettis county were in need of a party journal, we have commenced the publication of the Central Missouri Sentinel to supply that want. That it will receive the hearty support of the republicans we have no doubt; and it will be our aim to so conduct it, that it will be a welcome visitor in every household in Central Missouri. We have come to stay and do our share towards building up the city and surrounding country. We will not make any great promises as to what we will do, preferring to let you judge us by our future action."

 In behalf of the enterprise and its venturesome young proprietor, the BAZOO bespeaks the patronage of an intelligent public.

The Last Rites.

The funeral services of the late McCord R. Hall took place yesterday at the residence of his father, John L. Hall, on Broadway. A large number of friends were present and many a tear of regret was dropped to the memory of the man whose life had been so brief. The services were conducted by Rev. J. B. Fuller, of the First Baptist church in a most impressive manner, and the remains were followed to the tomb by a large cortege of friends.

Cord R. Hall was raised in this city and his genial ways and quick intelligence won him many friends in his boyhood days. He was kind-hearted to a fault and was no man's enemy. Now that he is dead let him be remembered for his good qualities and let his friends be consoled with the thought, "Death after all is only a sleep which briefly separates and which is peace, sweet, pure and deep."

ARTIFICIAL NOSES.

The Abnormal Proboles Which Belonged to a French Senator.

Artificial noses are generally attached to the face by spectacles. About five years ago a San Francisco dentist made for a Chinese woman, whose face was horribly disfigured, a celluloid nose. The organ was attached by a gold spring to the upper jaw, in the manner in which single teeth are affixed. The spring ran up to where the bridge of the nose should have been, and to this spring the artificial nose and lip were attached by an india-rubber loop. The combined pressure of the spring and india-rubber drew the celluloid mask so close to the face that, being molded to fit the cheeks, it would have looked quite natural but for the lack of that transparency which living tissue possesses. Of course, our funny paragon had to have his say after this bit of news appeared. He at once boldly stated that a man out West had a cork nose. "When he keeps sober," said the writer, "it gives him no trouble; but when he is out drinking with friends they want to borrow it for a stopper every time they lose their corks out of their flasks."

There is a true story of a French Senator, a very handsome man, who had a large nose of which he was somewhat proud. He was once riding in a train, when a child, who was in the same carriage, and who had watched the statesman for some time with dilated eyes, began to cry as if his heart would break. The mother could not console it. The little one was afraid of the Senator's big nose, and the mother quietly explained that her child had just come from the masquerade, where he had been particularly excited by the display of large noses. She concluded by requesting the statesman to take off his nose, "for you, I see," she explained, "for some good reason best known to yourself are prolonging the carnival." The Senator protested that he could not accommodate her, assuring the lady that his proboscis was not a false one, but his own. "Touch it," said he. The lady gave a pull at the Senator's nose, but it did not come off in her hand. "A thousand pardons," she said, "but pray—oh, pray, hide it with your hat!" The distinguished statesman complied with this singular request, continued his journey with his nose in his hat, and the child's screams subsided.—Brooklyn Magazine.

APPOINTMENTS OF O. GUITAR

Republican Candidate for Congress in the Sixth District of Missouri.

Fayette, Monday, Oct. 18.

Rochester, Tuesday, Oct. 19th.

Columbia, Wednesday, Oct. 20th.

To the voters of the Sixth Congressional District:

I regret that serious illness in the family of my distinguished opponent forbids his acceptance of my invitation, to make a joint canvass of the district; but, however, that circumstances will permit him to be present, at least, at some of my later appointments, to which he is cordially invited.

I especially desire, that my Democratic friends in this district will come out and extend to me, at least, the courtesy of a hearing.

The wide field, and short time left forces me to a rapid canvass, and compels me to limit the number of my appointments.

Hope to reach points named on the evening preceding date of appointments and that my friends will meet me on arrival, for consultation.

Very respectfully,
 O. GUITAR.

I suppose I must say that to be in form, but as I am an American I have never lost my love for my native land. I had a glorious time in England, and am very proud of my success there. I shall sing my favorite opera, 'Bal Masque,' here."

THE ANARCHISTS

Playing For a Little Longer Lease of Life.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—The future proceeding in the case of the anarchists sentenced to be hanged Dec. 3d., 1886, now promises to be more protracted and tedious than even those connected with the case have hitherto thought. A reporter in a talk with Attorney Foster, of the defense to-day learned that preparations for the argument before the supreme court are not being hastened so as to occur before the date fixed for the execution Mr. Foster said:

"Our stenographers are at work making a transcript of so much of the case as we need for our bill of exceptions."
 "You have no doubt, then, about a supercedas being granted?"
 "None whatever, it is never refused in important cases."
